Course Description

Our purpose in this course is to examine intersectional ties between queer sexualities, genders, and cultures. Through historical and theoretical lenses, we will examine political actions, social implications, and other issues in regards to queerness from a variety of different perspectives. Theoretical, historical, and political readings in conjunction with queer blogs will provide some necessary background knowledge to examine power and privilege as it affects and is affected by intersecting and conflicting notions of sexualities, genders, races/ethnicities, and classes, among other identities.

Required Texts

- 1.

- and cultural issues and make connections between theoretical arguments as well as the lived realities of the queer writers and bloggers that you analyze.
3. You will demonstrate through paper writing, WISE postings, and class discussion the historical and contemporary social implications that affect are affected by queer cultures, politics, and activism.
  4. You will demonstrate through paper writing an understanding of the complexities of academic writing and be able to develop an innovative thesis, anticipate your reading audience, reason and argue convincingly, and support your claims with concrete, textual evidence.
  5. You will demonstrate through paper writing the ability to practice writing as a process that entails brainstorming, research, outlining, and revision through multiple drafts.
  6. You will demonstrate through WISE postings the ability to identify and evaluate (via blog) useful research sources as well as relate it to the lived experiences of bloggers, theorists, and other writers.
